

DISCLAIMER

The Cat Protection Society of NSW Incorporated (the “Cat Protection Society”) is a not-for-profit incorporated association, registered in New South Wales. The objectives of the Cat Protection Society include:

1. Fostering, developing, improving and promoting issues relating to feline welfare;
2. Providing information, goods and services that promote and improve feline welfare, including the desexing of feline animals; and
3. Promoting and encouraging animal health and welfare initiatives.

This publication, and the information included in this publication, is intended for use ONLY by qualified and registered veterinary practitioners and allied veterinary professionals, such as veterinary nurses. The procedures depicted or otherwise described in this publication must not under any circumstances be performed by, or attempted by, any person who is not a qualified and registered veterinary practitioner.

This publication, and the information included in this publication, must only be used by veterinary practitioners and allied veterinary professionals as a general guide as to the desexing procedures depicted or described in the publication. The procedures depicted or otherwise described in this publication may or may not be relevant to particular feline animals, or certain circumstances.

This publication and the information contained in the publication is not, and must not be regarded as, clinical advice given to any veterinary practitioner or any other person. In particular, this publication and the information included in the publication is no substitute for a veterinary practitioner conducting a full examination of his or her feline animal patient; taking a full history from the animal’s owner or other person able to give that history to the veterinary practitioner; and reaching a diagnosis, and then treating the animal, based on accepted veterinary clinical practices.

Veterinary practitioners implementing any procedure or recommendation contained in, or described in this publication must exercise their own independent skill and judgment, or otherwise seek their own professional advice relevant to specific circumstances. Compliance with any procedures or recommendations contained in, or described in, this publication cannot of itself discharge the duty of care owed by a veterinary practitioner or allied veterinary professional to any animal patient, the animal’s owner, and others coming into contact with the veterinary practitioner.

This publication is published in good faith by the Cat Protection Society. While care has been taken in preparing the publication and the information comprised in the publication, The Cat Protection Society, its officers, employees and agents, and each veterinary practitioner and each other person appearing in or depicted in the publication have, to the fullest extent permitted by law, no liability (including without limitation, liability by reason of negligence) to any user of this publication or any other person in respect of any loss or damage (whether direct, indirect, incidental, special or consequential), cost or expense incurred by that user or person in connection with or otherwise arising from the use of or the reliance on the information contained in, or depicted in, this publication. This includes without limitation any loss, damage, cost or expense caused by reason of any error, negligent act, omission or misrepresentation in the publication, or any information contained in the publication.

This publication, and the contents of the publication, is subject to copyright protection. The Cat Protection Society is the owner of the copyright rights in the publication and its contents.

© The Cat Protection Society of NSW Incorporated